INTRODUCTION

The service industry has prepared me for whatever is next. Humans are the constant in everything we do, and I've spent the last ten years learning how to best relate to others in professional settings. Everything from cashier to caregiver to photographer, I've done it. Not only have these positions taught me how to relate with others, but they have also taught me how to enjoy them. I really love working with people, and I know this love will continue to serve me well in the next steps of my life.
